

Matthew Cornelius - Executive Director of the Alliance for Digital Innovation (ADI)

Matthew serves as the Executive Director of the Alliance for Digital Innovation (ADI) - a coalition of customer-focused commercial companies helping to shape government IT modernization efforts through advocacy and thought leadership. ADI exists to accelerate a positive vision of change by driving government's adoption of innovative commercial technology to empower the mission and ensuring that Federal agencies more effectively buy and use technology to deliver the modern, secure, effective digital experience citizens deserve. ADI serves as a unified voice for innovative companies who are dramatically accelerating transformational change in government through the use of commercial technology.

Prior to ADI, Matthew was a Senior Advisor for Technology and Cybersecurity Policy at the White House's Office of Management and Budget (OMB). In that role, he was primarily responsible for leading numerous government-wide IT modernization and cybersecurity initiatives, particularly the IT Modernization Cross Agency Priority Goal (a key pillar of the President's Management Agenda), the establishment of the Technology Modernization Fund, and oversight of critical government-wide technology and cybersecurity programs. Before OMB, Matthew served as the Senior Advisor for Cybersecurity to the Administrator of the General Services Administration and he began his Federal career as a Policy Advisor at the U.S. Department of the Treasury.
